Writing under date, 9th Jan., Morice, like O'Donovan, seemed to have a prescience of disaster, but he says, "I have eaten the salt of Egypt for seven years, and I cannot desert her in her hour of need." How he fought and fell with his face to the foe is told by the correspondent of the "Daily News," an eye-witness of the conflict, who saw Morice Bey and Surgeon Leslie standing together, and who says, "Morice Bey, after he had received a spear-thrust through the side, killed three of his assailants." He and Dr. Leslie fell almost at the same moment. Captain Forestier Walker and Lieut. Smith, in like manner, stood at their posts until they were speared.—(Vide "Illustrated London News," March 1st, 1884.)
